

LEAD's Leadership Qualities

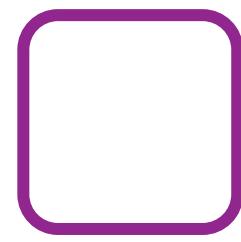

What are they?

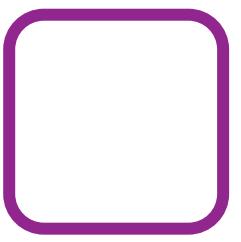

The 6 LEAD Leadership Qualities

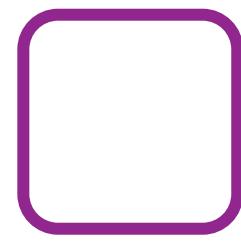

Social Literacy

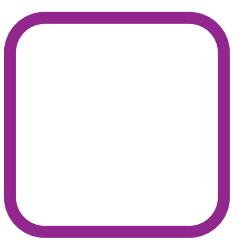

Self-Literacy

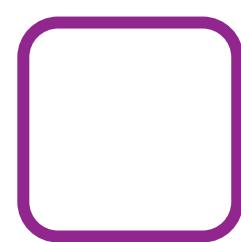

Self-Belief Purpose

Active Commitment

Reciprocity

Legacy

Social Literacy

The ability to use social skills to form and maintain authentic relationships

What are examples of these social skills?

Team work

Empathetic Listening

Self-Literacy

The ability to reflect and reframe challenging events in our lives as valuable opportunities

What do valuable opportunities mean?

These are opportunities to develop value-adding positive self-worth in other people's lives

Self-Belief or Purpose

The ability to reflect on our strengths (gifts and talents) as having significant potential to add value to others

What do you mean by significant potential?

It means you believe you have something to offer

Active Commitment

The ability to illustrate excellence as an example for others by consistently investing in and look for opportunities to utilize your "offer"

What does it mean to be an example of inspiration?

It means you can inspire others to improve themselves by constantly reinventing and refining your “offer”

Reciprocity

The ability to give, receive and act on constructive feedback for ultimate self-improvement

Why is feedback important?

The best way to identify weaknesses is through the eyes of others, as they may see areas for improvement that you haven't yet

Legacy

The ability to support others on their journey to self-literacy. And to help others activate “their own offer”, improving the quality of life for all.

www.leadcurriculum.org
info@leadcurriculum.org
+447949024607
© 2019 Leadership In Education
Services Limited

*Registered Company Number: 095758249
All rights, including copyright, in the content of this document, are owned by The Lead Curriculum*

The LEAD
—Curriculum—